WOMAN'S BUILDING.

Dimensions, 199 by 388 feet. Floor area, 3.3 acres. Cost $138,000. Architect, Miss Sophia B. Hayden, of Boston.

The building is two stories high, with an elevation of 60 feet. The rotunda is 70 by 65 feet, reaching through the height of the building, and covered with a skylight. On the roof of the pavilions are open areas which will be covered with oriental awning. One will serve as a cafe, and the other as a tea garden.

DIVISIONS OF THE BUILDING.

The Rotunda occupies the center of the lower floor, and on its walls are hung a large portion of the paintings exhibited by this and other countries, the balance being distributed through the various smaller rooms and exhibition spaces. The floor is occupied by about forty cases, in which are displayed choice examples of the work of women, each case being numbered and designated in the catalogue as Rot., case —. Most of the statuary will be found here. Connected with the rotunda are the north and south wings, the whole of the latter and a portion of the former being devoted to exhibits from foreign governments. The eastern portion of the north wing is occupied by the United States. The posts in these wings are lettered from north to south from A to F, and numbered from west to east from 1 to 10. Thus the posts in the northwest corner of each wing are marked A-1, and those in the southeast corner, F-10, and these letters and numbers are used in the catalogue to designate the location of spaces devoted to the various foreign governments and to individual exhibits in the United States section, as far as possible. West of the rotunda and north of the western vestibule are two salesrooms, the goods displayed there not being catalogued. South of this vestibule are the Bureau of Information and the Scientific rooms.

East of the Rotunda are the Process and Educational rooms, north of the eastern vestibule, and the Ethnological and Invention rooms south of it. All of these, as well as that devoted to Science, on the opposite side, are filled with exhibits, the general character of which is indicated by their titles.

IN THE GALLERY.

The southeast corner is occupied by the Board room and the offices of the Board of Lady Managers. The former is open to the public when the board is not in session and contains many works of art. The remainder of the south gallery is devoted to the Organization room, in which over fifty philanthropic and religious societies, clubs and educational establishments have been given space for the reception of their friends and the display of banners, statistics, etc. Passing north from the southwest corner of the gallery will be found the Exhibit room, devoted to a part of the overflow from the United States section, the British Nursing Exhibit room, Record room, New York Library room, another Record room, the Connecticut room (devoted to the use of the Foreign Commissioners) and the Committee room. The Record rooms are filled with interesting statistics of woman's progress throughout the world. The library contains most of the books and pamphlets on exhibition in the building, its title only indicating that its decoration and the care of its books are a contribution from the state of New York. In the northwest corner of the gallery is the Model Kitchen, where daily lectures on the art of cooking are given. The balance of the north gallery is occupied by the Assembly room, where lectures, concerts, etc. are held from time to time. In the east gallery, from north to south will be found the Dressing room, State Commissioners' room (decorated by Japan), California, Cincinnati and Kentucky rooms, the Superintendent's room, and another Dressing room. The furniture and decorations of the State rooms are contributions from the women of such states. With very few exceptions, all entertainments given in the building are open to the public, and no fee is charged under any circumstances.

The Woman's Building was designed by a woman, and its decorations and all exhibits displayed within its walls are the work of women.

HOW TO CONSULT THE CATALOGUE.

The list of exhibits from the United States, in all departments, occupies the first portion of the catalogue. This is followed by several special exhibits, and after them all foreign countries represented, the latter being arranged in alphabetical order. The list of each country or special exhibit is numbered consecutively throughout all departments. As far as practicable there will be attached to each exhibit in the building a card bearing the name of the country or special organization contributing it, and the words "Official Catalogue No." followed by a number corresponding to a similar one, under the same heading, in the catalogue. For example, if a card reads:

GREAT BRITAIN
Official Catalogue No. 40

By turning to that number in the catalogue, under the heading of Great Britain, it will be found that the exhibit is a sketch, made by the Queen of England, of a pug dog. On the other hand, should the visitor's attention be directed to this entry in the catalogue and wish to find the exhibit, he will notice that while most of the articles from Great Britain are in the north wing, between A-1 and F-1, this special exhibit is located in the northeast gallery.

To find the exhibit of any particular person without consulting the general index, which of course is the simplest method, one must know the character of the article exhibited, and then run through the group headings in the classification in the front of the catalogue until the group in which such an exhibit should be classed is found, when, by referring to that group under the proper country heading, all exhibitors of that article will be found alphabetically arranged. The figures at the extreme right of the columns indicate the class subdivision to which exhibits belong.

No attention should be paid to any numbers which may be affixed to exhibits except those appearing on cards in the form given above.

The abbreviations used in this catalogue are as follows:

Keppel Collection of Engravings, Etchings, Etc.

LOCATION—West Gallery, Sections A to C.

The aim of the present exhibition is to show, so far as space permits, what has been done by women engravers during the last three centuries. It has been gathered together with much care and owes its interest largely to the kindness of several collectors of Europe and America and, in the case of modern work, to the hearty co-operation of the artists themselves.

Owing to the limitations of space it has been found impossible, even were it desirable, to represent all who have of late years, worked with the etching needle, but sufficient is shown to exemplify the schools of France, England and America at their best.

Until comparatively recent years a woman engraver was the exception and though we find scattered through the three hundred years that have elapsed since the birth of the art, a fair number of women who have distinguished themselves in engraving, they are there rather through the force of their own individuality than from any general tendency toward a recognition of the equality of the sexes.

Doubtless strong opposition was at first to be overcome, but prejudice has lessened year by year until now the pictures by women are admitted to our public exhibitions on exactly the same basis as those executed by men, solely on their merits.

It is on this footing that the present exhibition should be judged.

In America not only have women established their right to an equal hearing with their male co-workers in the graphic arts, but in etching they can lay claim to at least three whose rank is of the highest, while in the field of wood engraving such good work has been done that it seems impossible for technical excellence to surpass it.

Exhibit No.

Ghisi, Diana, Italy, 1535.

Born in Mantua. Her plates date from 1581-1588. Engraved chiefly after Raphael, Tuccari and Giulio Romano. Her father and brother were also engravers.

Deny, Jeanne, France, about 1750.
She, with her brother, executed a series of illustrations to the works of Voltaire and Lafontaine.

18. A Ruined Tower. (Original etching, dated 1770.)

19. Allegorical Subject. (Etching after Monnet.)

Ellis, Elizabeth, England, about 1750.
Sister-in-law of William Woollett, the famous landscape engraver.

20. A Farm-yard. (Etching after William Woollett.)

Watson, Caroline, England, about 1760.
Worked both in mezzotint and stipple. Pupil of her father, James Watson. In 1785 she was appointed engraver Royal by Queen Caroline, and died June 10, 1814.

21. Madonna and Child. (Stipple engraving after Raphael. Proof. From the Earl of Hardwicke's collection.)

22. Infancy of Shakespeare. (Stipple engraving after Sir Joshua Reynolds.)

23. Portrait of William Woollett. (Stipple engraving after Gilbert Stuart.) Proof.

Carey, Regine, France, about 1770.

24. Landscape with Cattle. (Aquatint printed in colors after Rosa di Tivoli.)

Holbein, Theresa, Germany, about 1790.

86. The Road to the Beach. (Original etching.)

"Another attractive work is 'The Road to the Beach,' at Nonquit, Massachusetts, which was exhibited at the Paris Salon. It is very simple in theme—merely a stretch of low coast land with a few scattered shrubs and a wide road stretching away toward the slightly-lifted horizon line. But a great deal has been told for this simplicity. The very spirit of such a scene is caught and given. Even without the title we should know that there was salt in the air and the sea at the end of the road." (Mrs. Schuyler van Rensselaer.)
